

WHAT PARENTS CAN DO TO STOP SEXUAL HARASSMENT?

1. Strengthen relationship with your child

A strong parent-child relationship ensures that your children come to you when life gets difficult and also helping children feel comfortable talking with parents.

LISTENING TO YOUR CHILD

Connection starts with listening. Talking and listening to your child helps to build a bond with you and develop his trust.

TEACH YOUR CHILD TO BE A PROBLEM SOLVER

By helping your child find their own answer and solutions, you are empowering to feel confident and ability to cope with the world. Don't let your child play the blame game.

COMPLIMENT YOUR CHILD

Establish positive consequences to reinforce your child's good behavior. Celebrate your child's success and motivate them to keep doing well. Do not be afraid to say thank you or give a compliment to your child.

2. Empowering your child Teach them how to protect themselves.

TEACH YOUR CHILD TO SAY "NO"

TEACH YOUR CHILD TO "GO"

TEACH YOUR CHILD HOW TO "TELL"

3. Helping your kids manage risk

Teach your child a simple risk assessment method when approached by strangers. Risk assessment questions are as simple as:

- A. DO YOU FEEL GOOD ABOUT DOING THAT OR NOT?
- B. DO YOUR PARENT KNOW WHERE YOU ARE ?
- C. IF THERE IS DANGER, WILL ANYONE HELP YOU IMMEDIATELY?

IF THERE IS A
"NO"

IN ANY OF THESE 3 SELF-ASKED QUESTIONS,
LEAVE IMMEDIATELY.

4. BE AWARE OF YOUR CHILD – KNOW WHERE YOUR CHILDREN ARE.

5. Teach your kids that some parts of the body are private

Let your children know that other people should not touch or look at them. Encourage your kids to come to you if someone does.

6. Child internet safety

If you feel threatened or ask to do something that makes you feel uncomfortable or unsure, then immediately tell or consult a parent.

Never provide identifying information to strangers.

Don't accept any friend requests from strangers.

Do not make an appointment with a contact person online.
